PHILADELPHIA:

PRINTED FOR, AND SOLD BY, JOSEPH AND JAMES
CRUKEHANE, NO. 87, HIGH-STREET.

Note.—The intercalary day at the end of the Second-month (February) is this year omitted, in order to bring the equinoxes to their true points in the ecliptic.

ECLIPSES FOR THE YEAR 1800.

I. An eclipse of the Moon, on the 9th of the Fourth-month (April) at 15 minutes past 11 A. M.—of course invisible.

II. Of the Sun, on the 23d of the Fourth-month (April) at 31 minutes past 7. P. M. to us invisible. It may be seen on the N. W. coast of North America, and will be central on the meridian at 8 o'clock in lat. 55 degrees $\frac{3}{4}$ N. and long. 119 degrees $\frac{3}{4}$ from Philadelphia.

III. Of the Moon, on the 2d of the Tenth-month (October) at 45 minutes after 4 P. M. also invisible, the Moon clearing the earth's shadow about 2 minutes before she appears on the horizon of Philadelphia.

IV. Of the Sun on the 18th of the Tenth-month (October) at 11 minutes after 4 A. M. invisible here. The Sun will be centrally eclipsed at 36 minutes after 4, in lat. 50 degrees S. and long. 111 degrees E. from Philadelphia.

The Anatomy of Man's Body, as said to be governed by the Twelve Constellations.

α Aries, the head and Face.

To know where the Sign is. First find the day of the month, and against it the sign or place of the moon, in the eighth column. Then finding the sign here, it shews the part of the body it is said to govern.

We have inserted the above, and the prognostics of the weather, according to the most approved methods; but think it proper to inform our readers, that, in this enlightened age, the learned put but little confidence in them.

JANUARY: First Month.

The Social Fire.

WHEN beating rains and pinching winds
 At night attack the lab'ring hinds,
 And force them to retire—
 How sweet they pass their time away
 In sober talk or rustic play,
 Beside the Social Fire.

Ditto for every further sum of 500 dollars the additional sum of 1 dollar.

Policy of insurance from one district to another in the United States, 25 cents.

FEBRUARY. Second Month.

There many a plaintive tale is told
 Of those who, ling'ring in the cold,
 With cries and groans expire ;
 The mournful story strikes the ear,
 They heave the sigh, they drop the tear,
 And blefs the Social Fire.
 The legendary tale comes next,
 With many an artful word perplexed,

6	4 14	9 59	11 47	1. Never to sit for any length of time in absolute gloom, or exposed to a blaze of light. The reasons on which this rule is founded, prove the impropriety of going hastily from one extreme to the other, whether of darkness or of light, and shew us, that a southern aspect is improper for those whose sight is weak and tender.
7	4 41	10 47	○ 23	2. To avoid reading a small print.
8	5 5	11 37	○ 59	3. Not to read in the dusk; nor, if the eyes be disordered, by candle-light. Happy those who learn this lesson betimes, and begin to preserve their sight, before they are reminded by pain, of the necessity of sparing them; the frivolous attention to a quarter of an hour of the evening, has cost numbers the perfect and comfortable use of their eyes for many years; the mischief is effected imperceptibly, the consequences are inseparable.
9	rises morn	I 49		4. The eye should not be permitted to dwell on glaring objects, more particularly on first waking in a morning; the sun should not of course be suffered to shine in the room at that time, and a moderate quantity of light only be admitted. It is easy to see, bed should be neither altogether of a white or red colour; indeed those whose eyes are weak, would find considerable advantage in having green for the furniture of their bed-chamber. Nature confirms the propriety of the advice given in this rule: for the light of the day comes on by slow degrees, and green is the universal colour she presents to our eyes.

5. The long sighted should accustom themselves to read with rather less light, and somewhat nearer to the eye than what they naturally like; while those that are short-sighted, should rather use themselves to read with the book as far off as possible. By this means, both would improve and strengthen their sight; while a contrary course will increase its natural imperfections.

There is nothing which preserves the sight longer, than always using, both in reading and writing, that moderate degree of light which is best suited to the eye; too little strains them, too great a quantity dazzles and confounds them. The eyes are less hurt by the want of light, than by the excesses of it; too little light never does any harm, unless they are strained by efforts to see objects, to which the degree of light is inadequate; but too great a quantity has, by its own power, destroyed the sight. Thus many have brought on themselves a cataract, by frequently looking at the sun, or a fire; others have lost their sight, by being brought too suddenly from an extreme of darkness into a blaze of day. How dangerous the looking upon bright luminous objects is to the sight, is evident from its effects in those countries which is covered the greater part of the year with snow, where blindness is exceedingly frequent, and where the traveller is obliged to cover his eyes with crape, to prevent the dangerous, and often sudden effects of too much light : even the untutored savage tries to avoid the danger, by framing a little wooden case for his eyes, with only too narrow slits. A momentary gaze at the sun, will, for a time, unfit the eyes for vision, and render them insensible to impressions of a milder nature.

On Public Places.

THERE seems at present such a rage for pleasure, that solitude appears infupportable, and domestic comfort stupid. An immoderate fondness for dress is acquired, and many fashionable females spend half the night in going from one place to another merely to display their finery.

In the fine lady how few traits do we observe of those affections which dignify human nature ! If she has any maternal tenderness, it is of a childish kind, and were she to live many years she would still be a child in understanding.

For should the sea unagitated stand,
 Death, with huge strides, would desolate the land ;
 The searching sun, with unpropitious beam,
 Would give to Grief an everlasting theme ;

Dissipation leads to poverty, which cannot be patiently borne by those who have lived on the vain applause of others, on account of outward advantages; these were the things they imagined of most consequence, and of course they are tormented with false shame when by a reverse of fortune they are deprived of them.

In such scenes, what a painful train of reflections must arise in the mind! What convictions of the vice and folly of the world are prematurely forced on it. It is no longer a paradise, for innocence is not there; the taint of vice poisons every enjoyment, and affectation, though despised, is very contagious; languor follows the extraordinary exertions, and weak minds fall a prey to imaginary distress, to banish which they are obliged to take as a remedy what produced the disease.

We talk of amusements unbending the mind; so they ought; yet even in the hours of relaxation we are acquiring habits. A mind accustomed to observe can never be quite idle, and will catch improvement on all occasions. Our pursuits and pleasures should have the same tendency, and every thing concur to prepare us for a state of purity and happiness. There vice and folly will not poison our pleasures; our faculties will expand, and not mistake their objects; and we shall no longer 'see as through a glass darkly, but know, even as we are known.'

A U G U S T. Eighth Month.

The same unchanging Mercy rules

When flaming æther glows,
As when it tunes the linnet's voice,
Or blushes in the rose.

By Reason taught to scorn those fears
That vulgar minds molest ;
Let no fantastic terrors break
My dear Narcissa's rest.

Method of freeing Apple Trees from Moss.

THIS method consists, in daubing over the trunk, and all the large branches of the tree, when the sap begins to rise, with a large brush dipped in white wash, made of lime pretty thick, the moss and all the rotten bark, will soon after drop off, and be replaced by a new bark entirely smooth.

To preserve Apples.

STREW a quantity of dry white oak leaves, so as to cover the bottom of the hog-head, on these place a layer of sound hand picked apples, cover them with leaves, then another layer of apples, and so on alternately, leaves and apples, till you have the quantity desired; keep them in a dry place free from frost.

Approved method of keeping Crows from Corn Land.

TAKE a quart of train oil, as much turpentine and some bruised gun-powder, boil them together, and when hot, dip pieces of rags into the mixture, and fix on sticks in different parts of the field, five or six may serve for an acre. The birds will not approach the spot.

Receipt for destroying Bugs.

DISSOLVE half a drachm of corrosive sublimate, in a quarter of an ounce of spirits of turpentine, shake the whole well together,

Useful Hint communicated by the Royal Society of Sweden to that of London.

AFTER roofing a house with wood, boil tar in a kettle, and mix finely puverized charcoal with it, till it is of the thicknes of mortar; spread this with a trowel about a fourth of an inch thick over the roof; it will soone grow hard, and defy the vicissitudes of the weather. Roofs thus covered have stood in Sweden above a century and still want no repair.

Comparison between the Inhabitants of Denmark and Sweden.

THESE two nations, separated by a strait only, whose origin is doubtless, the same, who inhabit climates nearly the same, and speak the same language, exhibit remarkable contrats, both as to country, and inhabitants. In Denmark, the soil is stony but fuscible of cultivation; the hills are small, the woods of no great extent, but the plains are vast and boundless: and there are many small lakes, but no rivers. The clothes of the men are long and of a red colour. In Sweden, on the contrary, nothing is seen but mountains, rocks, deep vales, ex-extensive forests, large rivers, and immense lakes. Their clothes are short and blue. The Swede is of an easy, elegant figure, lively, laborious, cheerful, and capable of speedy attachments. The Dane is more clumsy, flower in his motions, fond of ease, does not work with equal alertness, is more serious and phlegmatic, more reserved, but more constant in his friendships. The dialect of the two languages is essentially the same, but it partakes of the characteristic differences of the two nations. Both speak with a singing cadence, but the Swede sings quicker than the Dane terminates many of his words by vowels, and in some provinces, by the a particularly: as buka, a book; beſka a horse; baka a mountain; and he raises the tone of his voice at the last syllable, after depressing it at the penults. The pronunciation of the Dane is slow, somewhat guttural, and most of his words end with a consonant, as book, beſk, baken. So that when two Swedes converse together, they inspire gaiety, while the melancholy accent of the Danes dispose to gravity. Both nations cultivate the sciences, and have distinguished themselves in the belles lettres. The Swedes can enumerate several great men, who have not only acquired celebrity at home, but are esteemed and admired by all Europe; such as Linnaeus, a Berquinian, a Celsius, a De Geer, (the Reamer of Sweden) a Menan-

The Danes on the other hand, can boast their Tycho Brache, Römer, Caspard Bartholin, Simon Pauli, Wormius Holberg, and many others. To whom let me add the present ornaments of Copenhagen, M. De Kratzenstein, rector of the university, and professor of Experimental Philosophy; the grand chamberlain De Suhm; De Trescauw, professor in Theology; and Kalischen, the Chiurgical professor.

On Political Experience.

A MODERN philosopher has told us, that all knowledge arises from experience; that therefore new experience is the beginning of new knowledge, and the increase of experience, the beginning of the increase of knowledge. The occurrences of life or business, which we pass through in a long series of years, sufficiently confirm the truth of this observation, which is further illustrated by the following anecdote, related by Sir James Porter, formerly ambassador at Constantinople.

Zamoski, the great chancellor of Poland, who had commanded the army of that nation, raised kings to the throne, refused the crown, and distinguished himself by so many illustrious actions, was looked upon by all his contemporaries as the wisest man of

Perform'd some glorious act of love for us,

We keep the time in mem'ry of the thing."

Hence he to Jesus points his good intent,

With pray'rs and praises celebrates his name;

And as to Christ alone his love is meant,

The Lord accepts it—and who dares to blame?

For tho' the shell indeed is not the meat,

'Tis not rejected when the meat's within?

the age in which he lived. After he had conducted business of the highest importance for many years, with great reputation, he happened one day to be surprised by some of his friends, in his closet, leaning on his elbow, and buried in a profound reverie. Upon their enquiring into the subject of his meditation, he made answer, that " he had been endeavouring to recollect the various transactions of his past life, and that he was astonished and confounded by a view of the great number of errors he had committed, and of the dangers to which he had exposed the nation, merely for want of sufficient experience to direct him."

TO love an enemy, is the distinguishing characteristic of religion, which is not of man but of God. It could be delivered as a precept, only by him who lived and died to establish it by his example.

IF thou dost good to man, as an evidence of thy love to God, thy virtue will be exalted from moral to divine; and that happiness, which is the foretale of paradise, will be thy reward upon earth.

RECREATION after business is allowable; but he that follows his pleasure instead of his business, shall in a little time have no business to follow.
